

D

I'm not robot!

D allows writing large code fragments without redundantly specifying types, like dynamic languages do. On the other hand, static inference deduces types and other code properties, giving the best of both the static and the dynamic worlds. void main() { auto arr = [1, 2, 3,14, 5.1, 6]; auto dictionary = ["one" : 1, "two" : 2, "three" : 3]; auto x = min(arr[0], dictionary["two"]); } auto min(T1, T2)(T1 lhs, T2 rhs) { return rhs < lhs ? rhs : lhs; } Automatic memory management makes for safe, simple, and robust code. D also supports scoped resource management (aka the RAII idiom) and scope statements for deterministic transactional code that is easy to write and read. import std.stdio; class Widget { } void main() { auto w = new Widget; scope(exit) { writeln("Exiting main."); } foreach (line; File(_FILE_FULL_PATH _).byLine()) { writeln(line); } writeln(); } Built-in linear and associative arrays, slices, and ranges make daily programming simple and pleasant for tasks, both small and large. The D programming language Modern convenience. Modeling power. Native efficiency. void main() { import std.range, std.stdio; auto sum = 0.0; auto count = stdin.byLine.tee!(l => sum += l.length).walkLength; writeln("Average line length: ", count ? sum / count : 0); } D 0 . . . 0 .
